Subject: Microsoft Settlement

As a retired citizen, using MS Windows 98, I would like to say I wish our Justice Department would stop any further action against Microsoft. I am very pleased with the company and in no way feel injured by Microsoft. On the contrary I feel they have helped me by making their products available. I have many friends who feel the same way and it is apparent to me that most of the objections to Microsoft are from their competitors rather than their customers. Success in the market place should be encouraged by our government, not hindered. When will our government officials stop petty projects and concentrate on the issues of real importance to the nations citizens? If Mr. Gates had contributed huge sums to our political parties and candidates, would the situation be the same? If Microsoft were located in Mass or Utah would their politician's opposition to Microsoft be as strong? I think not. I see this as a political game and object strenuously.
